

KEYA PAHA COUNTY, NEBRASKA Springview Herald

About us

The Springview Herald is a community newspaper located in the heart of Keya Paha County, nestled in Springview, Nebraska. It is our mission to provide thorough, credible, and up-to-date information that local and area residents want and need to know. It is our goal to publish stories that interest our local and out-of-area customers in north central Nebraska and south central South Dakota. The Springview Herald has proudly been publishing the news since 1886, providing this newspaper years of committed readers and followers.

Advertising your business in the Springview Herald continues to be an economical, effective means of reaching potential customers and keeping their business in the local area. We are always grateful for the opportunity to meet new customers and for the working relationships we have with so many of our faithful clients. Our goal is to promote and attract OUR readers to YOUR business. We circulate nearly 700 papers each week and consider our "local trade area" to be Springview and the surrounding communities of Long Pine, Valentine, Ainsworth, Bassett, Winner, Burke, and Gregory.

We are proud members of the Springview community, and are long-standing members of the Nebraska Press Association and the National Newspaper Association. Our editor is a past-president of the Nebraska Press Association State Board, and currently serves on multiple sub-committees.

The Springview Herald would appreciate your readership and your business, and as an added bonus we will offer advertisers a 5% discount on ads you run every other week with a year commitment, or 10% discount if you run your ad each week for a year (discount available on 2x4 or larger ads).
